IMPARTIAL, NOT NEUTRAL.

SHANGHAI, SATURDAY 16 MAY, 1863

WITH every desire to promote the entente cordiale subsisting between the subjects and citizens of different nationalities composing the community of the "Foreign Settlement of Shanghai," nevertheless we consider it our duty as an independent journalist to expose or condemn the acts of any one in authority, of whatever nation, if these infringe upon the rights and privileges of the residents. A case has transpired during the past week which not only involves a breach of these rights and privileges, but the committal of a gross outrage on the person of a British Subject, by the French police, of the most flagrant and unjustifiable character, without the delinquents being punished as they deserve. It appears that on the 8th inst., Mr. Gamble, manager of the printing establishment belonging to the Presbyterian Mission, situated at the extreme boundary of what is commonly called the French Concession, was walking in the adjacent Chinese suburb, on his own ground across the bridge, when he saw a French policeman seize two well-dressed Chinamen, and begin to drag them towards the bridge. Mr. Gamble interfered, as he knew that the policeman was beyond his boundary, and laid his hand on one of the men, when the policeman declared that he would arrest him also. Regardless of the threat, he went to the station house to see fair play to the Chinese, as he had learnt from them that the policemen wanted to "squeeze" them; their refusal to comply being the cause of their arrest, as they did not reside within the French Concession. When Mr. Gamble got there, some words in French passed between this policeman and four or five others, whereupon he was surrounded by them, handcuffed, and marched like a felon through the streets, followed by a crowd of Chinese and some few gnors. He was thus taken to the jail of the French Consulate; thrust into a filthy cell amongst thieves and vagabonds of the worst kind, until there forcibly thrown upon his back and his feet secured in the stocks. While in this position these policemen insulted Mr. Gamble in the most disgraceful manner, and would not listen to his complaints at the outrage. In this state he remained in durance vile for some time, when the Superintendent of Police came; and appeared somewhat astonished when he inquired into the case; he at once released Mr. Gamble and remarked that it was all a mistake. Next day Mr. Gamble went to Mr. Harvey, H. B. M. Consul, and preferred the charge against the French police. This was duly communicated to M. Maubuissin, H.M. Consul; who, in consequence, had an interview with his colleague, when Mr. Gamble was present. In endeavouring to arrange the matter, the French Consul said that it was not desirable it should go any further, as he would reply, to Mr. Harvey that the men should be incarcerated for five days, and mulcted of one month's pay, and there the affair would drop. However, neither the British Consul or Mr. Gamble were satisfied with this sang froid manner of dismissing a grave offence; consequently the matter is still under negotiation between the two consulates, and the injured complainant has appealed to the press to ventilate the subject—an appeal to which we readily respond.

The outrageous conduct of the Shanghai French Police seems to be nothing new or singular. Since our exposure of the case of Mr. Gamble, several others have been communicated to us, of even more serious nature, wherein their animus has been especially directed against Englishmen residing within their arbitrary bounds. About three months ago, two young men, British subjects, took up their residence there, renting a couple of rooms from a French resident. They had amongst their lares and penates, a safe, where they deposited their moneys for the purposes of business. One day, shortly after one o'clock, a man in private clothes suddenly entered their apartments, and without why or wherefore began to examine every nook and corner. On this, one of the occupants demanded what he wanted, and receiving no reply, shewed the intruder down stairs. When they descended, the latter opened his mouth and said in broken English that he was a sergeant of the French Police. Very good! was the reply, but what did he want, and why did he insult respectable people by his extraordinary procedure. To these queries he made no reply, though he indulged in exceedingly insolent language, so the aggrieved party said he would go and see the French Consul about it. The latter told him to speak to the Secretary to the Council, and he was on his way to that gentleman's house when he met his Chinese servant running in haste to inform him that his friend was taken to the Police station by the French constables. He proceeded thither, found the statement correct, his friend handcuffed, and thrown into a cell. While speaking to him, four or five fellows came behind, pushed him into the cell, and handcuffed him also. After this they were both forcibly thrown on their backs, and their feet locked in the stocks. This was on a Sunday at half past one in the day; and the two Englishmen remained in that degraded position until eight o'clock at night, occasionally jeered in the vilest language, the mildest of which was that they were John Bull pudding Englishmen and that anything was too good for them; to their request for food and drink, all they received was a dry piece of bread contemptuously thrown at them. About 8 P.M. the door of their cell was opened, when their benumbed limbs were released from the stocks, and they were marched up stairs to the Commissary of Police. Here they represented their case, and as that official saw that something was wrong, he coolly told them, as he has since done in the case of Mr. Gamble, that it was all a mistake. On the following Monday the two gentlemen went to the British Consulate and represented the facts of the outrage in writing; which were communicated to the late French Consul M. Edan, from whom no satisfactory explanation was obtained. Seeing how precarious was their security of person and property while residing on this so-called French Concession, they crossed the Yang-king-pang with their goods and chattels, and now live in perfect security and comfort on what is called the English Concession; where an efficient and respectable police force is established to maintain, not to break the peace.

Thus have we given in plain unvarnished language the substantial facts of two outrages by the French police, which, if they had been perpetrated by English, would have raised a storm of indignation that would only have been allayed by the instant and severe punishment of the aggressors.

UNDER its present energetic leadership, the Soonkiang Force bids fair to quickly regain the reputation for constant activity and unvarying success which it had merited under the conduct of Ward, but which since his death had become somewhat dimmed by a considerable period of inactivity, followed by the disastrous defeat of Tai-tsan and the several successive repulses in the attempted relief of Chiang-zu. Both these blots have now been wiped from its standards. The latter city has been relieved, and the country cleared for twenty-five miles inland from the Yangtze; and Tai-tsan taken after a resolute defence, which heightens the credit due to the victors for the achievement. These distinguished successes have been attained within less than a month, and a third—the capture of Quin-san—might probably have been added to their number within the same brief period, had not circumstances rendered an attack undesirable at the time the troops appeared before the city. It has, however, only been temporarily checked, and though the delay is unfortunate, because the appearance of the troops before the walls will have taught the Rebels where to expect the next blow, and probably induced them to strengthen their defences, by awakening them to a sense of their danger, we have confidence that fortune will again favour the Imperialist arms. We have been led thus to recapitulate the recent movements of the Soonkiang Force, by perusal of a passage in the highly laudatory General Order issued after Tai-tsan was in possession of the disciplined Chinese. Major Gordon says with justice:—

"The Force has now claims which will be pushed to the uttermost; and it may rest assured that the Officer Commanding will leave nothing undone to have every thing pulled on a satisfactory and proper footing."

A more favourable opportunity for removing some of the abuses, resultant from mandarin interference, which have of late crept into it; and for securing from the Chinese authorities privileges for its members to which they are justly entitled, could not be chosen than while the halo of success still surrounds their arms; and while,—we will not say gratitude for, but appreciation of, their services is at its height. The measures to which the assent of the Chinese requires to be obtained before the Force will be placed on the footing it merits are not few; but they must be obtained gradually; and for a commencement, it will be well if some of the most important can be secured. Foremost among these is a compensation for wounds to both officers and men, and a pension in such as are disabled from further service. Excepting those who have joined from the British army, still retaining their commissions, the great majority of officers in the force have nothing to fall back on if incapacitated from further duty. In no service in the world are officers required to expose themselves as are those of the disciplined Chinese. The large proportion borne by the casualties in recent actions to the number engaged, proves how great is the risk incurred, and yet in no other service that we are aware of, is there a total absence of compensation in the event of its members being suddenly and permanently invalided. We are sure that Major Gordon will forcibly impress this matter on the Chinese authorities, and exert all the influence which his own services and those of the force must give, to induce them to concede such a scale of pension as shall at least secure a subsistence to men who gallantly and constantly expose their lives in their service. The influence of the English authorities, too, might with propriety be exerted on behalf of men so large a number of whom, though in the Chinese service, are British subjects. Another point which is much desired by the officers of the Force, is that all should hold commissions from the Emperor. Difficulty might perhaps be found in obtaining consent to this measure in its full extent; but it could no doubt be arranged that field officers should receive their appointments from Pekin, and all below that grade from the Futai of the province;—an arrangement which would materially add to the prestige of the higher rank.

But in addition to such concessions as it may be possible to obtain for the benefit of individual members, we trust Major Gordon will urge another point,—one that we had almost despaired of seeing attained, but of which there may be now again some slight hope, namely, the increase in number of the Force. If it be possible for the Chinese to shake off their jealousy sufficiently to consult their own interests, the present should be a favourable time to urge the proposal; and if Quin-san fall, the necessity for the measure may be impressed on them still more strongly. We fear a limit will then have been put to the operations of the Force, so long as it is confined to its present strength; unless indeed Sherard Osborn's guns can be brought into play against Soochow with sufficient effect to compensate for the small number of the besiegers. One step has, we believe, been already gained, in the assent of the Chinese to the formation of a European company; but however valuable these may be to give dash to a storming party, or as skirmishers by ability to use their rifles with certainty, they will not render a comparative handful equal to the numbers who would have to be encountered if it were attempted gradually to clear the country towards Nanking. Numbers as well as quality will be required if that is to be tried. The increase of the Force is not only important to the Chinese, because it would enable more decisive operations to be undertaken against the rebels than the occasional capture of a city or the infliction of an occasional defeat which, however gallant actions in themselves, can only slightly affect the ultimate result of the rebellion; but it is important to the English as a step towards the tranquillisation of two provinces which are important seats of commerce, and at the same time removing the necessity for maintaining so large a body of men at Shanghai. We doubt not that Major Gordon will impress on the Chinese how necessary such a measure is to the success of a struggle with which he is now identified; and that the British authorities will accord him their influential support.

IMPORTANT NEWS FROM JAPAN.

As we were on the point of going to press, the following important intelligence regarding the state of affairs in Japan was kindly forwarded to us by a "Disappointed Visitor." The news was brought by the steamer Rajah, which it will be seen has brought a large number of passengers, and by which the trip was performed in the remarkably short space of 52 hours, from the anchorage at Nagasaki, which was left at 4 P.M. on the 13th inst., to the beacon which was reached at 8 P.M. on the 15th. We are informed that the passengers feel much indebted to Captain Cato for the care shewn in studying their comfort, and providing them with adequate accommodation, no easy task considering the over-crowded state of the steamer. It will be seen that the date of the Rajah's departure from Nagasaki is two days subsequent to that fixed for the final answer of the Japanese to our ultimatum, but the result does not appear to have been known. The hostile bearing which the Japanese have assumed towards foreigners has, however, an unpropitious appearance.

"The Steam Ship Rajah, Captain Cato, left Nagasaki 13th May, 1863, at 4 P. M., bringing the undermentioned passengers, Messrs. Garratt, A. J. Whalley, J. M. Ringer, C. J. Skeggs, H. E. Amoore, Sam Maltby, A. Joost, E. Bohlens, Lieut. Vasitition, (Russian Navy), Capt. Möller, Capt. G. Keppel, Mrs. Thos. Keppel and son, Mrs. Green and 2 daughters, Mrs. Schut and 2 daughters, Mrs. Wicks and son, Mr. and Mrs. Verbeck and 3 children, Mrs. St. Aubaire and 2 children, J. Tolman, P. Bindale and 16 steerage passengers, also Messrs. Keik and Buttselath.

Great excitement prevailed in the place, all foreigners shipping off their books and valuables, the Germans and Dutch even sending off their furniture, on the morning of our departure. Consequent on advices received from the Governor of Nagasaki, H. B. M. Consul issued a Circular recommending the foreign community to hold themselves in readiness to quit the port at a moment's notice, and to sleep on board ship at night, as a sudden attack might be made, for although the Governor had promised to give timely notice of a declaration of war, he at the same time stated he could not control or be responsible for the acts of the Princes or their followers, who were assembling large forces in the town and neighbourhood.

In consequence of the above, a meeting of the community was called, to consider what should be done under the existing circumstances. At the meeting it was stated that the Consul intended sleeping on board one of H. B. M. ships of war that night, as the Senior Officer noting under the Admiral's instructions had refused to lend a guard either for the Consulate or the settlement, but had promised to keep a guard boat during the night off one of the jetties. Whereupon it was unanimously resolved that they were not justified in abandoning the property of themselves and their constituents until an actual attack was made on life or property. It was further proposed for their better safety, that the whole of the community should assemble at one or two of the adjoining houses on the Bund, some of their number keeping guard, and to patrol the street by night. At this stage of the meeting our informant was obliged to leave as the steamer was on the point of starting.

Advices received from Yokohama, dated 8th instant, stated that the time allowed to the Japanese Government for their answer had been extended to the 21st inst. At this place also, the foreign inhabitants were making every preparation for a speedy exit.

In Nagasaki a noticeable change had taken place in the bearing of the Japanese towards Foreigners, the former jostling the latter in the street and shewing other symptoms of disrespect. In one instance a two sworded man was known to enter the house of a resident, and on being told to quit by one of the servants he took up a piece of bamboo cut it in two, signifying he would serve him (the servant) the same if he interfered with him; thereby shewing that Foreigners are becoming more distasteful to the Natives every day, and that they have every reason to expect an outbreak at any moment."

Shanghai Volunteer Rifle Meeting.

YESTERDAY, the second Rifle Meeting of the Shanghai Volunteer Corps, took place at the Butts on the Hong-qua ground; when four prizes were competed for. There was but a small muster of infantry, considering the number of members enrolled, while, in proportion, the cavalry volunteers made a good show. Indeed it was chiefly owing to the Shanghai Mounted Rangers and their spirited commanding officer Captain Panmure Gordon, that the day's proceedings came off with that eclat which they did. They had a spacious marquee on the ground, with a recherché cold collation spread out, to which all comers were invited. This was not only responded to by the numerous officers of H.M. regiments in garrison, and a number of foreign residents; but the Volunteer infantry, who had a separate tent and tiffin of their own, marched across, with their comestibles, and made a pleasant party of the whole. Sparkling wines were quaffed, and toasts drunk, so that the day passed in joviality; while the band of H.M. 2nd Belooch regiment were outside on a knoll under the shade of some trees playing delightful music. As the day was unusually fine for Shanghai, and the surrounding country rich in crops of waving grain, the scene and the occasion was one to be pleasantly remembered by every one present.

The shooting commenced precisely at noon, for the Long Range Cup presented by the Officers of H.M.'s 31st Regiment.

Entrance, .....$10

15 shots { 5 at a range of 350 yards. 5 " " 500 " 5 " " 600 "

Twelve competitors entered for the prize, which was well contested for. The firing on the whole was exceedingly good, and far superior to that of the Autumn Meeting. Points and Hits were counted, so that out of 15 shots, the winner of the prize, sergeant Temple, scored 24; three others scoring 21 each, as follows:—

Sergeant Temple .... S.V.C. ..24.
Lieutenant Thorne .... " ..21.
Private Muller..... " ..21.
Private Munson..... " ..21.

The second prize was a Sweepstakes.

Entrance .....35.

10 shots { 5 at a range of 200 yards. 5 " " 400 "

For this event, 18 competitors entered. The firing was equally good with that for the first prize, and won by the same marksman, Sergeant Temple, after a hard contest with Captain Turner S.V.C. when they tied twice. The latter gentlemen, however, got the prize, as the 8th Rule provides that, "No competitor be allowed to carry off more than one prize." Every one remarked the steady shooting made by Sergeant Temple; who, we may incidentally mention, was a member of the far-famed "London Scottish Rifle volunteer Corps"—commanded by Lord Elcho—having served two years in this crack regiment. Should his Lordship or any of his late comrades see this report, they will be proud to learn that a "Brither Scot" has distinguished himself so notably in the far East. Last year it was a "Chiel frae the Land O'Cakes," Corporal Maclean, who carried off the chief prizes.

The following is the score of the highest competitors for this prize:—

| | Points & Hits. | Ties. |
|---|---|---|
| Sergt. Temple..... | 21 . | 2 |
| Capt. Turner, ..... | 21.. | 1 |
| Privt. Gore Booth, S.M.R. | 19 .. | |
| " Batt, S.V.C. ..... | 19 .. | |
| Lieut. Thorne, S.V.C,..... | 19 .. | |
| Privt. Gribble, " ..... | 19 .. | |
| " Cann,.. " ..... | 19 .. | |

Next on the programe was the Rangers, Prize. Entrance .....$ 5 to be shot for exclusively by members of the Shanghai mounted Rangers.

10 shots { 5 at a range of 150 yards. 5 " " 250 "

The gallant Rangers contested manfully for this prize, and kept up their credit by making good shooting; Capt. Gordon showing a good example, and Cornet Markham—who on no account would scratch until he had fired his last shot. Private Gore Booth, however, distanced them all, and came in the winner, as follows:—

Private Gore Booth, .....24
" Kelly, .....20
" Dallas, .....18

The last event of the day was for a Gold Medal.....Entrance $10.

10 shots ..... 300 yards.

There were 19 entries, both of cavalry and infantry for this prize, 13 out of the number completed their firing, which was excellent, especially that of Private Stoutt who was the winner, having obtained the high number of 24, and not missed the target once. Captain Turner led off well with three centre shots, but failed to follow up the advantage, as will be seen by the following score.

Private Stoutt, S.V.C. .....24
" Gore Booth, S.M.R., ..18
" Cann, S.V.C., .....17
Captain Turner, " .....16

Thus closed a capital meeting, where everybody enjoyed themselves; and the Volunteer Corps showed excellent rifle practice. Sergeant Galbreath of H. M. 31st regiment noted as scorer; and deserves credit as instructor to the corps—who we have no doubt, will signify their appreciation of his services by some substantial token, before he leaves Shanghai with his regiment.

HANKOW CUSTOMS.

HANKOW, 5th May, 1863.

To the Editor of the North-China Herald.

SIR,—We lately had the pleasure of addressing you concerning the Hankow Customs. In our last we mentioned some individual hardships in the working of the present system, we now venture to occupy your columns with a few remarks upon the system itself; and to commence at the head, we propose a few observations on Hall Duties. What is the object of a Hall Duty? Does it enrich anybody? Does it not occasion trouble to all? Is it authorized by Treaty? In order to elucidate our remarks, we will confine ourselves to the principal and most valuable product of this place, namely: Tea.—Tea shipped from Hankow is generally, we may say universally, known to be for export for foreign lands; therefore all Tea shipped under the regulations, half duty is recovered upon. What is the effect of the present regulations? First of all, Tea must be shipped from Shanghai within three months of arrival at Shanghai. The hardships in this clause are evident to the mercantile man. For instance, we ship a chop of Tea from Hankow to our Agents at Shanghai;—circumstances of market, namely, dullness, expectation of a rise, &c. prevent their selling till the three months have expired. Why should we have to pay a duty, and a half duty? Have we committed any fault? In a second instance, say our agents, within the term allowed, sell to a purchaser for the colonies (which means Australia); how often is a shipper to Australia prevented from shipping off, by the non-arrival of that favorite clipper from Hongkong chartered by friends there or elsewhere? And lately, the same thing may be cited about New York or other American ports.

Secondly.—This iniquitous tax is particularly levelled at the poor man—Why should a man desirous to do a small and legitimate business here, have to hand over to the Imperial Customs a sum of, say according to circumstances, Tls. 4,000 to Tls. 7,000. How well could his money be employed! How fair an income could he make from good investment of this money! and now he has to lend, without interest, to the Imperial Customs this amount. And suppose our poor friend having, in spite of Customs exactions, made enough to satisfy his poor wants;—how is he to recover this money? only through the kindness of some rich friend who may buy his drawbacks.

Now to look at the other side of the question, what does the Imperial Customs gain? Their banker gains during the Tea season the interest on probably Tls. 100,000; this is under-calculated we think. The foreign employés in the Customs with one voice condemn the system, and well they may, considering their endless trouble and the frightful mistakes they make; which we would detail, only space does not allow of it. The only gainer by this detestable tax is the mandarin in charge; and what a petty and contemptible way to make money. Through the possible negligence of an underling in the Shanghai office of a China merchant, who may lose or mislay the certificate for drawbacks through the unfortunate detention of a sailing ship; or through the equally unfortunate dullness of the Shanghai market, which may prevent sales.

Another reason for the bitter feeling prevailing against the Imperial Customs here is the impossibility of getting our worthy Commissioner to settle any matters of doubt; which has raised with many, the following questions:—What is his supposed position? Should he have power to settle any question respecting the Customs' work without reference to a second party? We have found, as well as many others, that his position is that of a clerk or interpreter to the Taotai, especially at Hankow. We know of cases which could have been settled without any hesitation on the part of the Commissioner, but he would likely reply; "I will see what the Taotai says about it." Where any small matter is referred to the Taotai, in many cases a day or even more is lost, which with steamers is of much consequence. Why should merchants have to put up with such delay?

On the subject of duty on coals and charcoal, in the treaty it is mentioned that ships' stores are duty free. What are the Hankow coals but ship, or rather steamers' stores? Is it possible that the Imperial Customs believe that vessels export Hankow coals for sale. We would it were so—that is to say, that the coals were good enough to be of any value, but unluckily it is such common muck (excuse the coarse but expressive word) that many steamers will not burn it at all, while those who do can only manage to get up sufficient steam to go down the stream upon. And you may be sure that is quite unsaleable in Shanghai. In fact very many steamer owners have got so tired of the rubbish that they import English coal to this port for steamers' use. And the unfair duty on ships stores in the shape of coals is thus indirectly losing our country good, though we may be sure without the intention of the Imperial Customs.

As to charcoal, in rule second of the appendix to the treaty, charcoal is mentioned as a duty free article. On what principle then should we be charged duty?

We will, in our next, write you some remarks about what is here called the Sycee question. This is a more complicated subject than those we have yet treated on; but it is very sure that here we pay at the rate of 110 per cent, and in Shanghai they pay 111 per cent; while the actual difference in the Hankow weight of Sycee and Shanghai, is 2½ per cent.

We are,
Sir,
Your obedient Servants,
DUTY PAYERS.

British Consular Court.

Saturday, May 16th, 1863.

Before FREDERICK HARVEY Esq., and assessors.

WOOD vs. LOFTUS.

This was an action for defamation of character. The Consul enquired if the parties had come to any arrangement.

Mr. COOPER, for the defendant, stated that he thought it would be unnecessary to proceed with the case. His client had missed a pair of Pistols from his cabin shortly after a friendly visit from the plaintiff, and believing the Pistols had been taken away as a joke, he complained about it, not to any third person, but to the plaintiff himself. Under a little irritation he complained in rather strong language, and for this the plaintiff sued for defamation of character. Although the letters were not actionable, Capt. Loftus had sent a written apology for any annoyance he had caused the plaintiff, and he thought it would have been accepted. He now begged to repeat that the defendant never intended to impute any petty larceny to the plaintiff, or that he had any motive beyond a practical joke, and that defendant withdrew all expressions which had given offence.

Mr. LAWRANCE, on behalf of the plaintiff, stated that as an ample apology had been offered, of course it would be accepted as the only object his client had in bringing the action was the vindication of his character, his client informed him however that he had never received the letter of apology that had been mentioned. Considering however that the charge was admitted, his client thought he was entitled to some damages, as the defendant ought not to have acted as he had done, and as they had been brought there at some inconvenience, he would suggest that one hundred dollars as damages should be awarded.

It was ultimately agreed at the suggestion of the Consul, that the Defendant should pay expences, and the case closed.

Visit to the Presbyterian Mission, Chinese Printing Establishment, in Shanghai.

IN an out-of-the-way corner of the suburbs, near the East Gate of the walled city, just at the southern boundary of the so-called "French Concession," a quiet little chapel rears it head amongst a labyrinth of Chinese houses and shops. Business led our footsteps in this direction the other day, towards the printing premises attached to the chapel, and we were agreeably surprised to find so complete and well-regulated an establishment; which reflects the highest credit on its manager, Mr. William Gamble. Although capable of printing any piece of English typography, yet the chief feature is the resources at hand to publish any work in Chinese or Japanese characters. Of the former, upwards of fifty publications have issued from the press, consisting of treatises on geography, history, botany, zoology, astronomy, and others specially appertaining to the religious works of the mission. Of Japanese publications, fewer have been issued; but the establishment has just finished an elaborately printed volume in octave, with upwards of 250 pages by the Rev. S. R. Brown, on "Colloquial Japanese," which is the most useful book on the language hitherto published, and essential to every merchant having dealings with Japan. We shall take an early opportunity of reviewing this book. Meanwhile, it may be interesting to our readers, as it was to us, to learn more about this China Printing Office.

To the uninitiated, it may not be generally known that the compositors of China characters, have double duty to perform from those of English letters. The latter stand before their alphabet and compose within arms' reach, whereas the former have an assistant who travels round a room full of characters, and brings his gatherings to the compositor seated at a table. In order to simplify this arrangement as much as possible, and render the compositor independent of assistance, Mr. Gamble has his cases arranged in a circular form, with the characters which occur nine times out of ten within reach of the hands of one man. This plan not only expedites composition, but economises labour. Not only has Mr. Gamble improved upon the ordinary mode of setting up Chinese type; but he has improved upon its manufacture. The usual plan in forming moulds to cast these characters, is by hammering steel punches expensively cut, into copper ingots. Of these moulds, this establishment has sets from the best founts in Europe for casting Chinese type, which alone cost $10,000. Mr. Gamble has entirely superseded these by an ingenious and scientific process in which he utilizes native labour in a remarkable degree. He has one of the most skilful chinese wood-engravers in Shanghai, who cuts a row of characters, like an ordinary hong stamp, on wood, shaping the lines, dashes, and dots most delicately. These slips of wood are about three inches in length, and are set in lines into a frame about ten inches square, showing some 500 characters on the surface. This frame is immersed in the trough of a powerful galvanic battery, containing a strong solution of copper, which is precipitated upon the characters cut in wood and forms a correct matrix. These matrices are then cut out, filled in, and dove-tailed into small brass ingots, which are slipped into a larger mould for casting the body of the type in the usual way, by injecting the molten type-metal from a small crucible. In this manner they are speedily cast; the rough edges polished on stone and made ready for use. Altogether, the casting room is a model of simplicity and ingenuity, where all the workmen are Chinese; and the adaptation of local skill in applying the characters cut in wood for the manufacture of lead types, invented by Mr. Gamble.

In the press room, is a gripper printing machine, driven by bullocks, travelling on a revolving platform attached to an endless chain, which is a capital substitute for hand labour with a fly-wheel as a motive power. In the binding room, native female labour is employed in sewing the books after the Chinese fashions, at which they are very expert. Upwards of fifty individuals are at work, and live upon the premises. Altogether, the establishment is most creditable to the mission and its indefatigable manager.

THE RECENT OUTRAGE BY THE FRENCH POLICE.

IN translating the following letter from the Secretary to the French Municipal Council, on the subject of the outrage committed on Mr. Gamble, we have adhered as closely as possible to the text, and wherever a doubt could possibly arise as to a shade of meaning, have given the original French word. Mr. Schmidt takes exception to the terms in which we characterised an outrage which we still consider of the most gross and unjustifiable character; but on re-perusal of our remarks we see no reason to modify them.

SHANGHAI, 12th May, 1863.

To the Editor of the

DAILY SHIPPING & COMMERCIAL NEWS.

SIR,—I beg you to insert in the next number of your journal the following reply to an article entitled: Outrage by the French Police, and published in your issue of to-day.

Without dwelling on the choice of your expressions, which are far from being gracious (gracieuses), I will say that they might have been more moderate (mesurées). The interest of truth demanded that many circumstances which modified the affair should not have been suppressed in your account.

The apologies which were next day addressed to Mr. Gamble by the guilty parties, the assurance which was given him that they should be punished, and the offer of a pecuniary reparation, if he desired it, were so many motives of satisfaction which ought to have induced him not to push matters farther, especially if he took into consideration his character of Missionary.

Whatever may have been the faults of the Police, I deny that they made use of any violence towards the Chinese whom they were directed to arrest. If Mr. Gamble considered it his duty to complain, he knew to whom to address himself, and had no right to interrupt the Police in the exercise of their duty; such interference would not be tolerated anywhere, and there could be no reason why it should be so, unless Mr. Gamble held from the Chinese authorities the mission of protecting their countrymen.

If Mr. Gamble had been less-warm (vif), nothing would have come of this affair; but when a man of his character gives way to a first impulse, uneducated people are at least excusable if they follow his example, especially when they do not understand the English language, as a means of explaining themselves.

I deny in the most formal manner that Mr. Gamble was recognised by the policemen, or that he was made the object of insult or ridicule (moqueries) during his detention, which did not last more than a quarter of an hour, the Commissary of Police having let him go.

As soon as I was informed of this affair, I was the first to demand a severe enquiry and the punishment of the guilty parties.

Permit me in conclusion to express to you my great (vif) regret that passion should have entered into this discussion, and that you should not have thought it necessary to be more careful of the feelings (de ménager les justes susceptibilités) of those whose duty it is to adjudicate on it.

Receive, Sir, the assurance of my sentiments of distinguished consideration.

ED. SCHMIDT.
